

A display device or a camera includes an organic electroluminescent element emitting multiple color lights. A driving condition setting circuit sets data corresponding to driving conditions for driving the organic electroluminescent element. A drive circuit drives the organic electroluminescent element on the basis of the driving conditions set by the driving condition setting circuit.